

Several overseas studies have demonstrated that allowing power lines to carry signals in the HF frequencies cause (not might cause) serious interference with other users of these frequencies.

The benefits of such a boon for the power companies is far overshadowed by the widespread negative impact on all other users.